

This is where young people are often groomed and forced into relationships with gang members and made to perform sexual acts.

Child Sexual Exploitation (CSE)

Gangs sometimes use violence to threaten young people when recruiting them. Gangs will become violent towards the young people working for them if they find their drugs or money are missing. Weapons and acid are sometimes used to make violent threats.

It's when someone builds an emotional connection with a young person to gain their trust for the purposes of exploitation. Young people can be groomed online or face to face, by a stranger or by someone they know (for example a family member, friend or professional). Groomers may be male or female. They could be any age. Many young people don't understand that they have been groomed, or that what has happened is abuse.

Grooming

The young person often isn't aware that they are being exploited. They are "groomed" by being encouraged, tempted or threatened to carry out crime for the benefit of the gangs. In return they are offered friendship, but also cigarettes, drugs (especially cannabis), alcohol or even food and accommodation. This often involves high levels of violence, threat and force.

Put simply, County Lines is the Criminal Exploitation of Children (CCE), where gangs will find and use young people to move drugs and money for them. Young people as young as 10 are recruited, often using social media. They are exploited and forced to carry drugs between locations, usually on trains or coaches. They are also forced to sell drugs to local users.

- Young people may be at risk of harm from the vulnerable adults who may also be being exploited by the gangs, e.g. using their homes as a trap house. Those adults often have their own needs such as learning disabilities, substance misuse or mental health issues, and there have been cases of harm to young people by those adults.
- Young people receive a small cut of money/clothes/status or are 'looked after' by 'elders', i.e. given items of clothing/footwear.
- Organised crimes groups have been known to set up young people in robberies, meaning that a young person believes they are in debt to the gang. This is where the young person believes they have to work for free to pay off the debt or find a way to pay it off themselves. This can also happen if the young person is actually robbed, or if they are arrested and have drugs, money or the phone confiscated by police.
- Young people are often given targets to sell drugs to, given modes of transport such as mopeds, bikes or train tickets, weapons to protect themselves, and a phone with drug users' contacts on it.
- Young people are often given targets to sell drugs to, given modes of care homes/placements.
- Young people can be vulnerable to targeting at pupil referral units, alternative education provisions, special education needs provisions and out criminal activities.
- Young people can receive money, mobile phones, expensive clothing, jewellery, new haircuts or other items and gifts in exchange for carrying drugs inside their body, or made, to internally insert and carry young as often 10 are targeted too.
- Boys aged 14 to 17 are the most targeted, however girls and children as young as often 10 are targeted too.
- Young people are targeted and trafficked into smaller towns. Young people are also targeted in smaller towns.
- Both boys and girls can be exploited.

Some key facts to remember with regards to criminal exploitation include:

Key facts:

Other terms you may hear around County Lines:

Cuckooing - Is when drug gangs take over the home of a vulnerable person through violence and intimidation, using it as their base for selling/making drugs.

Going Country - This is the most popular term that describes county lines activity. It can also mean travelling to another city/town to deliver drugs or money.

Trapping - Is the act of selling drugs. Trapping can refer to moving drugs from one town to another or the act of selling drugs in one.

Trap House/ Bando - A building used as a base from where drugs are sold (or sometimes made). These houses usually are lived in by someone usually adult drug users but sometimes young people are forced to stay in trap houses.

Trap line - This refers to when someone owns a phone purely for running and selling drugs.

You may feel you owe money or favours to a gang and could be forced to pay off 'debts'. You may have been given things like clothes and alcohol at the start of your new friendship. Over time you may have experienced threats or violence and been made to break the law.

It's not okay for someone to intimidate you or be violent towards you.

What is County Lines?

County Lines is a very serious issue where criminal gangs set up a drug dealing operation in a place outside their normal area. They will move their drug dealing from big cities to smaller towns like Bedford, or Leighton Buzzard for example in order to make more money. This is where they will try to groom young people to force them to sell drugs for them.

Staying Safe: What you can do

Being safe is important. If you don't feel safe it can make you feel unhappy or stop you doing things you enjoy like going out with your friends. The information here can help you keep yourself and your friends safe. But remember, if you're really worried about anything, you should talk to someone about it. Speaking out as early as possible is important. Gang members will often make you feel that if you speak out you will be in more trouble than what you actually will be in. The longer you stay quiet the more trouble you could get into.
